Guide to different types of bets

Whether you are new to betting; if you just want to know more ways in which you can place your bets or are looking to formulate a new strategy, this guide gives you a simple breakdown to a variety of different single and multiple bet types.

Single

1 individual selection in 1 selected event. Your pick must win.

Double

Consists of 2 different selections from 2 different events. You will need both picks to win in order to win your bet.

Treble

Consists of 3 different selections from 3 different events. You will need all 3 picks to win in order to win your bet.

Accumulator

Consists of 4 or more selections from 4 or more different events. You will need all of your 4 (or more) picks to win in order to win your bet. A Fourfold accumulator will contain 4 selections, a fivefold will contain five selections and so on...

Win

Your pick must win or come first in the event

Place

Your selection must finish within a certain pre-defined number of places from the winner of a race/ event. Returns are calculated on a fixed proportion of the winner odds of the selection.

Each Way

An each-way bet consists of two separate bets with equal stakes; the win bet where the selection must win/ finish first in the race and the place bet where your selection must finish within a certain pre-defined number of places from the winner of a race/ event. If your selection wins the race both parts of the bet pay out. If your selection doesn't win but places you will lose half your total stake (the win stake) but you will win the place side of the bet at a reduced proportion of the odds you got for the selection to win.

Full Cover Bets

Full cover bets can be a great fun way to bet on sports and increase your chances of landing something. To receive maximum winnings on the following bets all of your selections must win. Alternatively returns will be calculated accordingly depending on the type of bet within each that you win e.g. (single/ double/ treble/accumulator) and the odds of your chosen selections.

Note that your stake is multiplied by the total amount of bets involved which means that it is potentially possible to win back less than your original total stake therefore making you a loss even if you have won part of your bet. Therefore it is always worth using a betting calculator to check the connotations beforehand.
